

COOKIES

Cookies can be thought of as small text files that are stored on your computer or mobile device, if the website you are (currently) visiting determines this. These files are stored in your browser and contain information about which website they come from, how long they should be stored on your device, and they also store some value (information about you), such as the language of the site or your login details. We use first party cookies, files that are set by us, as well as third party cookies. These are files from a domain other than the domain of the website you are currently visiting, and are mostly used for marketing and advertising purposes.
